WELCOME TO SCOTLAND

I am delighted to have been asked to welcome you to Scotland on the back of what was a truly unforgettable year for me personally. There can surely be no bigger thrill than captaining your team to victory on home soil and I was privileged to experience that for myself at Gleneagles during last year’s Solheim Cup. Quite simply, it was the greatest week of my career. To win is always a great feeling but to do it in front of a home crowd, only an hour-and-a-half from my home in North Berwick, was extra special.

As a proud Scot, it was wonderful to see and hear the compliments people had both for Gleneagles and the country in the build-up to, during and since the match. Once again, we demonstrated why, when it comes to golf, there’s no place quite like the cradle of the game.

This year marks my 26th year as a professional golfer and, in the last quarter-century or so, I’ve lost count of the number of times somebody – from supporters to fellow players – has asked me about the best places to play golf in Scotland. It has an appeal that is truly unique.

That’s where this guide comes in. It is designed to give you all the information you could possibly want about our rich history and fabulous courses. It is split into six regions to make it easy for you to navigate.

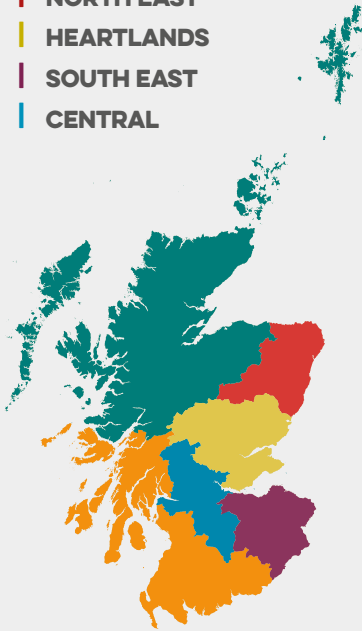

Whatever it is that you’re looking for – from the background to how we invented the game or the phone number or email address for a specific club – you’ll find it all in here.

All that remains is for me to say, on behalf of all my compatriots, welcome to Scotland! You’re going to love it here.

'IT'S JUST OUT OF THIS WORLD'

"Scotland is a fantastic place to play golf. It's very friendly and it's also very cheap to play in the home of golf. Compare it to other destinations and you're getting a really good deal. There is so much to offer. Scotland is just such a good place to go and play golf. There is no place like Scotland after your round, what with all the pubs and restaurants to go to, there really is so much going on. It's just out of this world."

Sam Torrance

Welcome to Scotland, the birthplace of golf, and the home of many of the world's best courses. You're going to love it...

From Cambodia to Canada, Lithuania to Lebanon, and Bulgaria to Belize, there are golf courses in every corner of the globe – but there's only one country that the sport calls home, and that's Scotland.

A number of other countries have, at various times, tried to lay claim to being the cradle of the game but none can lay claim to what Scotland can: historical documents that support their claims with tangible evidence.

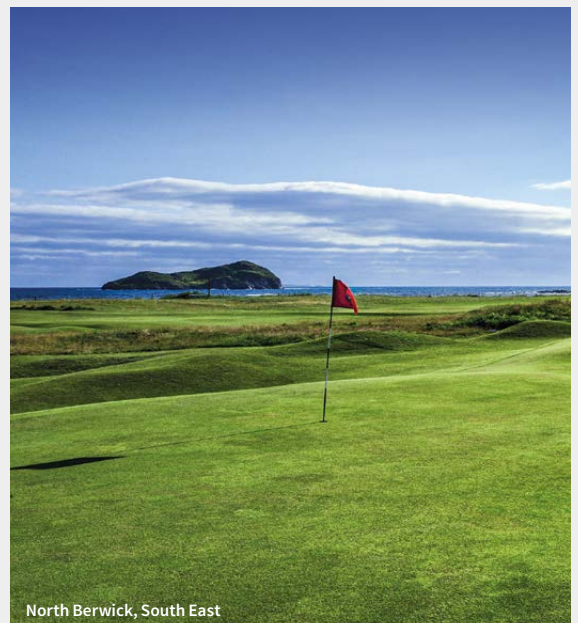

The first written record of golf can be traced back to March 6, 1457, when King James II banned the sport.

The monarch wrote: "It is ordained and decreed that football and golf be utterly condemned and not practised." He had grown tired, it appears, of the game distracting his people from military training – more specifically, archery practice – and so it was prohibited by royal command.

That's how it stayed for almost half a century before the ban was finally lifted when the Treaty of Glasgow – also known as the Treaty of Perpetual Peace – came into effect in 1502. A significant moment in history, it put an end to the warfare that Scotland and England had waged against one another for the preceding 200 years and paved the way for the Union of the Crowns just over a century later. This, in turn, led to the formation of Great Britain as we know it today.

For golf, the signing of the Treaty of Glasgow was a significant watershed. With a reduced need for military training, the people of Scotland could once again enjoy playing the sport, which, in turn, laid the foundations for it to become the multi-national sport and multi-billion business it is today.

“IT WAS WILLIE PARK SNR WHO ENTERED THE HISTORY BOOKS AS THE FIRST CHAMPION GOLFER OF THE YEAR”

The most recent detailed research puts the total number of people who play golf around the world at over 60 million, with more than 31,000 different courses spanning six of the seven Continents.

However, the oldest of them all is found right here, on the east coast of Scotland, in the ancient university town of St Andrews.

Archbishop Hamilton’s Charter from 1552 is the earliest documented evidence of the people of the town being allowed to play golf on the famous links adjacent to the West Sands. Principally a license to allow the Archbishop to breed rabbits on the ground, the document also permitted locals to continue “playing at golf, football, schuting at gamis, with all uther maner of pastyme as ever thai plais.” From that, the Old Course was born.

In addition to being the home of the world’s oldest course, St Andrews is also widely accepted as golf’s spiritual and administrative hometown. The sport’s ruling body, The R&A, is based directly behind the first tee of the Old Course, whilst the influence of the game is felt all throughout the town.

So it’s appropriate, then, that it was a St Andrews man who helped to increase the game’s popularity during the 19th century. That man was Thomas Mitchell Morris Sr, although you may know him better as ‘Old Tom Morris’. Born on 16 June 1821, Morris was the son of a weaver and started playing golf at the age of ten. According to folklore, he used to knock wine-bottle corks pierced with nails around the streets of the town using a homemade club before, at the age of 14, he was hired as an apprentice by Allan Robertson.

Widely regarded as the world’s first-ever professional golfer, Robertson operated St Andrews Links and was the owner of an influential equipment-making business. Morris spent a number of years working with and learning from him before leaving to take up a job at Prestwick Golf Club in Ayrshire. It was there that he helped to establish golf’s first real professional tournament: The Open Championship.

Morris himself struck the first-ever shot in The Open on 17 October 1860, where a further seven golfers joined him at Prestwick to do battle for the Challenge Belt. Made from red Moroccan leather and embellished with a silver buckle and emblems, the belt was the brainchild of the Earl of Eglinton, a leading light in the championship’s creation. However, there was to be no fairytale victory for Morris that first year. Instead, it was Willie Park Sr of Musselburgh who entered the history books as the first-ever ‘Champion Golfer of the Year’, beating Old Tom to the title by two shots.

Experience Golf's Greatest Test at Carnoustie.

For golfers the world over, Carnoustie is a magical destination, considered the most challenging place to play golf. It was here, Tom Watson won his first Open Championship and Ben Hogan reigned victorious in his only Open appearance.

The 147th Open in 2018 saw Carnoustie host its eighth Open Championship, and along with the annual Alfred Dunhill Links Championship, the course has played host to the prestigious Women's British Open and two Senior Opens, making it one of very few courses to have done so.

Regarded as the most challenging of The Open venues, The Carnoustie Championship Course presents a unique test and features the toughest closing stretch of holes anywhere. Described by Padraig Harrington as "the hardest finishing hole in Championship Golf" those who respect the course will be rewarded with a fair score and an unforgettable experience.

With designers, Old Tom Morris and James Braid making little change to the original characteristics of the Carnoustie land, the fairways and greens follow the natural contours on the world's best links which borders the North Sea. A unique course that provides a personal test for every calibre of golfer.

Carnoustie is the pinnacle of authentic links golf, a must for any golfer, with Links House, just a few yards from the first tee of the world famous Carnoustie Championship course. The world leading facility boasts a well stocked professional shop and seven state-of-the-art golf simulators which enables golfers, visitors and locals to play and practice away from the elements. Since then, The Open has become an annual fixture in the British sporting diary and, along with The Masters, the US Open and the US PGA Championship, it is one of the four men's major championships.

It has been held every year, with the exception of 1871 and during the First and Second World Wars, with the most recent edition in 2019 having taken place at Royal Portrush in Northern Ireland, where the Emerald Isle's own Shane Lowry won his maiden major.

Nowhere, however, has staged the championship more than St Andrews. The Old Course, in fact, was the first course outside of Prestwick to stage the event. The Ayrshire links hosted the first 12 championships before it moved east to St Andrews, no doubt partly on account of Old Tom having returned there to take up the position of greenkeeper and professional in 1865. It has since hosted it 29 different times.

As well as the Old Course and Prestwick, five other places in Scotland have staged the championship: Musselburgh Links, Muirfield, Carnoustie, Royal Troon and Trump Turnberry. With the exception of Prestwick and Musselburgh Links, all continue to feature on what is called the 'Open Rota' to this day. In total, the event has taken place in Scotland on a total of 96 occasions. It will next be played here in 2021, when the Old Course plays host to the 150th edition of the championship.

Towards the end of the 19th century, interest in golf had really taken hold across Scotland and the wider UK, and new courses soon began to appear in just about every part of the country.

Designs were drawn up by the sea, amidst parks, through dramatic mountain ranges, on the edges of cliffs, within glorious forests, inside luxurious country estates. Wherever there was an opportunity to build a course, one would soon appear, invariably crafted by the design skills and intuition of some of the game's most important figures.

Old Tom was one of the foremost designers of his day and lent his talents his to the likes of Carnoustie's Championship Course, Cruden Bay and Royal Dornoch.

James Braid, meanwhile, was behind the King's and Queen's Courses at Gleneagles, as well as Boat of Garten, Downfield and Royal Musselburgh. The Elie man was equally adept as a golfer, winning The Open on five occasions.

“TOWARDS THE END OF THE 19TH CENTURY, INTEREST IN GOLF HAD REALLY TAKEN HOLD ACROSS THE WIDER UK”

DID YOU KNOW...

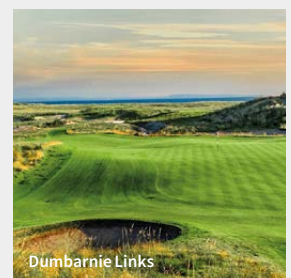

The Old Course at St Andrews was traditionally played in the opposite direction. It also used to have 22 holes, until four were dropped about 200 years ago.

Muirfield is famed for its stunning links turf. Former R&A boss Peter Dawson once said he could stage an Open at the Gullane venue at any time during the year.

Documentary evidence proves that golf was played on Musselburgh Links as early as 2 March 1672 - though Mary Queen of Scots reputedly played there in 1567.

“SCOTLAND HAS A DISTINGUISHED LIST OF COURSES THAT ARE THE ENVY OF COUNTRIES AROUND THE WORLD”

More recently, modern Scottish stars have designed exceptional courses of their own in their home country. Sam Torrance’s eponymous links at the Fairmont St Andrews Resort in Fife is one such example, whilst eight-time European Tour Order of Merit winner Colin Montgomerie created the popular inland track at Rowallan Castle in Ayrshire.

Truth be told, though, wherever you look, you will find a golf course that takes your fancy. With over 550 layouts to choose from, it goes without saying that you are spoilt for choice.

As well as Open host venues, Scotland is also home to the likes of Kingsbarns Golf Links, Castle Stuart, Royal Aberdeen, Royal Dornoch, Gullane, Dalmahoy, Dundonald Links, North Berwick, Monifieth and so on. It is a long and distinguished list that is the envy of many other countries around the world.

Now, you could easily be forgiven for thinking that they cost a small fortune to play but nothing could be further from the truth. On the contrary, one of the great things about golf in Scotland is how affordable, accessible and inclusive it is. Whether you have £20 to spend on a green fee or £200, whether you are a scratch golfer or have never swung a club before in your life, whether you are a young child or a grown adult, there is something for everybody here in our country – and you don’t have to look hard to find it.

We Scots are famous for our friendliness. We’re accommodating, helpful and love nothing more than showing off all that is great about our country to the hundreds of thousands who visit it each year. To that end, we’ve got accommodation to suit every budget and bias. From B&Bs, to five-star hotels, to campsites, to self-catering cottages, to ‘Air B&B’, we’ve got the lot. We’ve also got an environment to suit every visitor: big cities, quaint towns, rural villages and so on. Whatever you look for from a great break, you’ll find each and every ingredient here in Scotland.

The simple fact of the matter is that we want you to enjoy yourself when you are here experiencing the best of Scotland. Go out, explore, taste, see, hear, feel and play – we want you to get the very most out of your visit to our country, the home of golf. We love our country. We’re sure you will, too.

There is no better way to sample an authentic Scottish golf experience than playing one of the country's many majestic links courses.

No visit to Scotland would be complete without experiencing golf the way that it was originally intended to be played, when the first recorded rounds of golf were played in St Andrews around the middle of the 16th century. In order to do that, you need to play a links course.

The game has grown massively since then, especially in the last 20 years, through new technology, new players and new audiences, which has helped take the game to previously unthinkable heights.

However, throughout all of that, there has, and always will be, one constant: links golf. Links isn't a term specific to golf courses. Effectively, it's a strip of generally undulating but sandy terrain linking the sea and the arable farmland around the British Isles. As it was often unused, it proved to be perfect ground for golf, due to its firmness and grass which, when cut, provides an easy-to-maintain playing surface.

In the main, links courses are found in coastal locations. The word 'links' is thought to be derived from the Old English word 'hlinc', which means 'rising ground', or 'ridge', and was commonly used to describe an area of coastal sand dunes. For golf course architects, it is the dream location.

For many traditionalists, links golf is the ultimate test of a golfer's skill, as it requires so much more than a drive, an iron and a putt. Links golf demands imagination and creativity, and it is a game played

'IT'S ABOUT PLAYING THE GAME'

golf being played on the Old Course at St
Andrews every single year.

'I COULD GET THE BALL UP & DOWN!'

I really didn't like links golf in the beginning, but the one thing I could do was chip and putt. I could really get the ball up and down. When you play links golf courses, you miss more greens on your approach shots than you do on soft American greens. So getting the ball up and down was right in my wheelhouse, so to speak. I think that's one of the reasons I had such great success on them.

Tom Watson

Royal Aberdeen, North East

close to the ground, rather than through the air.

This criteria matches the great Seve Ballesteros perfectly. The late Spaniard is regarded as one of the finest links golfers of all time, having won the Open Championship on three occasions, and Seve is famous for his miraculous escape shots from almost every possible spot on a links course. After winning his first Open at Royal Lytham in 1979, aged 22, he famously said: "I play good from the rough – I have plenty of practice."

He also observed another important element that regularly plays a major part in links golf: "The biggest problem when playing links courses is the wind. If the wind is up, then it's a real test," he said.

Colin Maclaine, chairman of the 1979 Open committee, perhaps summed up Seve's play on links courses better than anyone: "Seve preferred his own course, which mainly consisted of hay fields, car parks, grandstands, dropping zones and even ladies' clothing."

It is vital that you stay out of the aforementioned places when playing some of Scotland's finest links, especially when the almost ever-present wind is up.

Links is golf as it was originally intended to be played, and, as a result, roughly one in five of Scotland's 550 courses is a links. On the whole, traditional links courses have simply been laid out over the natural terrain, and haven't been forced upon the land. Hence why it is deemed the purest, and most challenging, form of golf there is.

Links are largely exposed to the elements, and tend to have very few trees. Bunkers are smaller and deeper than those on an inland course, and the turf is noticeably different also. You'll find grass that has short blades with long roots, and wispy, long grass in the rough. The type of soil drains very quickly, and this allows many links courses to be open 365 days of the year.

Links golf isn't easy, it's often unfair, but it is undoubtedly golf at its very best. 🏌️‍♂️

Check out the Scottish Links Collection. A hand-picked selection of the best links courses in the country, each and every one of them comes very highly recommended indeed. www.visitscotland.com/golf

TIME FOR NINE?

'I LOVE PLAYING NINE HOLES!'

Nine hole golf, to me, is absolute bliss. I just love playing nine holes. I would much rather play nine holes than just practise for a couple of hours.

Mel Reid

The popularity of nine-hole golf has increased hugely in recent years and, with over 150 great courses to enjoy, why not join the trend?

Pushed for time but still desperate to grab your clubs and get out on the course? Nine-hole golf is the answer to all your problems. The sport has embraced nine-hole golf in the last few years and that step away from the traditional game has, so far, been a huge success.

The results of a survey conducted by golf's governing body, the R&A, back in 2015 discovered a particularly intriguing statistic that would trigger a change in how the 18-hole game is played. It highlighted that 60% of people would enjoy golf more if it took less time. It also discovered that, amongst 25 to 44-year-olds who are unhappy with the time required to play the game, more than one in five would like to see the playing time reduced by up to an hour-and-a-half. The survey also showed that 19% would love the chance to play nine holes more often.

The answer? Embracing shorter formats of the game, similarly to other sports such as cricket with the introduction of T20, and this is exactly what the R&A did with the introduction of its annual Nine Hole Championship. Its success has been evident, with over 15,000 golfers entering nine-hole qualifying events held at clubs throughout Great Britain and Ireland.

In Scotland, the nine-hole qualifying event again took place at Milnathort Golf Club after a hugely successful debut in 2018 that resulted in the event spanning two days due to the high volume of entries. The final is held each year on the Saturday prior to the Open Championship, giving 42 golfers the chance to play one of the world's greatest courses in peak condition.

If you are now convinced, you're in luck, as Scotland is home to an abundance of nine-hole layouts. Roughly one in five Scottish golf courses has just nine holes, and although they are only half the size of a conventional layout, they lack absolutely nothing in terms of enjoyment, attraction and challenge. Just ask 1999 Open champion Paul Lawrie, who knows a thing or two about golf.

“I am very supportive of shorter forms of the game, including nine-hole golf,” said the two-time Ryder Cup player, who owns his own nine-hole course in Aberdeenshire. “It’s great to see that so many clubs and golfers around the country are involved in organising and playing nine-hole competitions.”

The popularity of nine-hole golf is clear and easy to see. The sport isn’t reinventing the wheel though, with so many courses to choose from, but the fun and faster form of the game has perhaps been overlooked at times.

One of the key aspects of the nine-hole format is that it appeals to people who don’t have much in the way of spare time. Whether it’s through family commitments and attempting to juggle this with work, or through general day-to-day life, some golfers simply can’t afford to spend upwards of four or five hours playing golf once or twice a week. However, for many such golfers there is an answer: nine-holes, which naturally takes half the time to play being half the size of the regular layout.

The majority of the population are now very time conscious, therefore with the average time to play a nine-hole course being only a little more than an hour-and-a-half, it is the ideal alternative that many people will be desperate for.

Add to this the fact that half the number of holes generally equates to half the cost – if not more – which is fantastic news for those who still love playing the sport but don’t particularly want to burn a hole in their pocket.

As if that wasn’t enough, nine-hole courses are also mainly more relaxed and, therefore, ideal for those who enjoy a round but aren’t necessarily golf fanatics. It is also for this same reason that it is the perfect location for families to enjoy the sport or those looking to simply practise.

Clubs are now beginning to cotton on to the fact that their members and visitors require better flexibility in order to allow them to play 18-holes when they can but with the option of nine-holes when a full round isn’t possible. Indeed, nine-hole memberships are growing in popularity and are typically far more affordable than a full membership.

So, this begs the question, where can you sample the best nine-hole courses in Scotland? Look no further than the home of golf, St Andrews, which is home to numerous courses, including the Balgove. The best thing about this course is you don't need to book in advance, you can simply turn up and play. It's brilliant fun, featuring numerous bunkers and a double green.

Perthshire is home to a wealth of fantastic nine-hole courses, and one of the best can surely be found at Gleneagles, host to the 2014 Ryder Cup and 2019 Solheim Cup. It is affectionately known as the 'Wee Course' and solely comprises par-3s, complementing the three world-class courses at the resort.

However, the pick of the nine-holers in Perthshire may just be Killin. Dating back to 1911, it offers stunning scenery of Loch Tay and the majestic Ben Lawers mountain range. The best is saved until last here, as the 500-yard par-5 ninth is regarded as one of the most scenic holes in golf. Perthshire is also home to St Fillans, Comrie, and the Dornock Course at Crieff.

In and around the country's capital, Edinburgh is home to many great nine-hole layouts but the most famous of all must be Musselburgh Links. It is one of the oldest courses in the world and has hosted six different editions of The Open. Plus, it is less than £20 to play!

As well as Lawrie, two-time Open champion Padraig Harrington is a huge advocate of nine-hole golf and the benefits it can provide.

"I'm pleased that clubs are offering more opportunities for people to enjoy nine-hole golf," the Irishman said. "This is both socially and also competitively, including for handicap purposes."

Whether you are short on time, on a budget or simply looking for something for all the family, there are plenty of nine-hole courses for you to enjoy. ☒

11th St Andrews (Old) PAR 3 YARDS 174

How tough is this little beauty? Put it this way: it was once described as the shortest par-5 in golf! Occupying one of the most exposed parts of the course, it can play anything from a hybrid or long iron to a wedge depending on the wind strength and direction. The green, meanwhile, slopes from back to front and is protected by the troublesome 'Strath' and 'Hill' bunkers. It'll be the best par you'll ever make.

A track made entirely of holes from Scottish courses on the Open rota? It doesn't get much better than this...

Of the ten courses currently on the Open Championship rota, five are in Scotland. In addition to the Old Course in St Andrews and the Ailsa at Trump Turnberry, you also have Royal Troon, Muirfield and Carnoustie – a quintet of the greatest courses not just in the home of golf but anywhere in the world.

Ever wondered what a golf course comprising the pick of the holes from those five layouts would look like?

That's the task we put to Michael McEwan of Scotland's only golf magazine, bunkered. Here's his 'Ultimate Open Course':

1st St Andrews (Old) PAR 4, YARDS 376

Arguably the most famous first tee in golf, the opening hole of the Old Course has one of the widest fairways in the game but beware: there's out of bounds left and right, the Swilcan Burn encroaches down the fairway and you will, more often than not, have an audience for your first shot of the day. Historic, brilliant and challenging – what more could you want?

11th Royal Troon PAR 4, YARDS 482

The toughest hole on the course – according to the Stroke Index, at least – the 11th is a long par-4 where trouble is never far away. From the railway line on the right that runs parallel to virtually the entire hole, to the thick gorse that awaits a hooked tee shot, it is brutal but brilliant.

15th Muirfield PAR 4 YARDS 448

A left-to-right dog-leg, this is a superb par-4 that's famous for its heavily guarded and raised green, which members refer to as the 'Camel's Back'. This is typically one of the toughest holes whenever the Open comes to town.

17th Carnoustie PAR 4 YARD 461

Is there a more difficult penultimate hole in championship golf? Not likely. The 17th at Carnoustie requires you to cross the Barry Burn multiple times and then drill a long approach into a narrow, well-protected green. A par here always feels like a birdie.

6th Royal Troon PAR 5 YARDS 601

The longest hole on the Open rota, the sixth at Royal Troon requires precision from tee to green. Incidentally, you can see another Open course from this hole, with the lighthouse at Turnberry further down the coast visible on a clear day.

PAR 4 YARDS 473

As close to a perfect finish as you can get, Muirfield's 18th has been the undoing of many players down the years. The prevailing cross-wind complicates the tee shot, whilst the bunkers that guard the entry and both sides of the green have to be avoided if you don't want to drop shots.

3rd Carnoustie
PAR 4 YARDS 350

Proof that not all great holes have to be long, the third at Carnoustie is little more than a 4-iron off the tee in most conditions to lay up short of the bunkers. Stay out of Jockie's Burn short of the small, undulating green and you'll give yourself a fine chance of a birdie.

9th Trump Turnberry (Ailsa)
PAR 3 YARDS 248

Once one of the weakest holes on this Ayrshire gem, the ninth is now unquestionably one of the finest. Transformed from a par-4 into a par-3, it plays entirely across the lapping waters of the Firth of Clyde from the championship tee toward a large, sloping green that lies adjacent to the iconic Turnberry lighthouse. Just magnificent.

Royal Troon, 8th

11th Trump Turnberry (Ailsa)
PAR 3 YARDS 215

A once mediocre par-3 is now a truly world-class one following a complete redesign in recent years. From the championship tee, you play over a succession of small inlets and rocky outcrops towards a green that is built into the rocks. Word of warning: don't go left.

11

PAR 5 YARDS 578

Named after the great Ben Hogan, who won the Open at Carnoustie on his championship debut in 1953, 'Hogan's Alley' isn't the prettiest hole on the Open rota but it's most certainly one of the toughest. With out of bounds down the left and a string of bunkers on the right, it rewards only the most precise shot-making.

PAR 5 YARDS 556

Don't be fooled by the number on the card – the ninth at Muirfield plays way longer than its yardage given that it plays straight into the wind. Out of bounds lurks all the way down the right of this somewhat 'S' shaped hole, whilst there are no fewer than eight bunkers and lashings of thick rough to negotiate.

13

YARDS 191

A truly outstanding short hole, Muirfield's uphill 13th has proven to be unlucky for many down the years, and even more so since it was lengthened by over 30 yards ahead of the 2002 Open. At almost 50 yards deep, you could be forgiven for thinking its green is a soft target but here's the rub: at its widest, it's 15 paces across, drops sharply from back to front, falls away to the right and has deep bunkers either side. Hit the green... or else.

Carnoustie, 6th

PAR 5 YARDS 565

After significant improvements made to the course in recent years, the Ailsa's tenth hole is magnificent from tee to green. Arcing its way around the bay, a good tee shot is required to give you any hope of picking up a shot. Watch out for the famous 'doughnut' bunker on your approach into a spectacular green that sits almost on the rocks.

PAR 4 YARDS 499

Where to start with this beautiful monster? Stay out of the Barry Burn, which you'll cross three times, avoid the thick rough, keep it out of the deep bunkers and don't go out of bounds and you'll have an outside chance of making par on what must surely be the most difficult closing hole in championship golf. As Padraig Harrington once said: "It's one of those holes that keeps you awake at night."

16

8th Royal Troon

PAR 3 YARDS 123

The 'Postage Stamp' – so called after being described by William Park in Golf Illustrated as a pitching surface skimmed down to the size of a Postage Stamp – the eighth at Royal Troon might be the shortest hole on the Open Rota but it is a huge challenge. Just ask Rory McIlroy. The Northern Irishman took a nine there during practice for the 2016 Open Championship.

18

PAR 4 YARDS 357

The toughest finishing hole in golf? Absolutely not. But you'll struggle to name one that's more iconic. Take dead aim at the clock on the R&A Clubhouse off the tee, staying away from the road (and parked cars) on the right, and make sure to avoid the infamous 'Valley of Sin' short of the green to give yourself a great chance of closing with an unforgettable birdie. Even if you don't, you get to have your photo taken on the Swilcan Bridge – a 'must' for any ardent golfer. ☒

17

PAR 4 YARDS 455

From having to cut the corner of the hotel off the tee, to the eponymous road that lies beyond the green and the devilish bunker that guards the front of it, the penultimate hole of the Old Course is a classic in every conceivable respect. Escape with a par and you'll be doing very, very well.

ONE GAME, MANY PLEASURES

Whatever you look to enjoy when it comes to playing golf, you are guaranteed to find what you are looking for in Scotland.

You could use any number of words to describe how good golf is in Scotland. It's dramatic, historic, enthralling and enchanting.

However, two particular words could arguably sum it up better than any others: variety and inclusive.

Firstly, it is truly a sport for all. When you play golf, especially in Scotland, forget any misconceptions you might have about golf being a game for all middle aged, middle class men. Here in the country that gave birth to it, golf is a game for everybody. It is an all inclusive, accessible and affordable pastime, regardless of age, race, gender and social status, which is proven to be fantastic for your own health and wellbeing, both physical and mental.

Secondly, golf is a sport of true variety. From 18-hole championship courses to nine-hole par-3 tracks, from competitive golf to social golf, it offers something for every man, woman and child who wishes to play.

The importance of being able to relax and enjoy a round of golf cannot be underestimated, especially in today's fast-paced world. According to a 2016 report, which analysed findings from 5,000 studies, playing golf regularly may prevent chronic illness, improve your mental health and increase your life expectancy.

Lead scientist Dr Andrew Murray, from the University of Edinburgh, was involved in the research: "We know that the moderate physical activity that golf provides increases life expectancy, has mental health benefits, and can help prevent and treat more than 40 major chronic diseases such as heart attacks, stroke, diabetes, breast and colon cancer," he explained.

Fortunately, a golf course in Scotland is never far away, but for those looking to fit a little of their favourite sport into their busy schedules, it can sometimes feel impossible. However, the answer is simple: why not try your hand at some of the country's vast array of wonderful nine-hole courses?

“SCOTLAND IS RIGHTLY CONSIDERED THE HOME OF HOSPITALITY - AND THE 15 MILLION-PLUS VISITORS WHO COME TO SCOTLAND EVERY YEAR CAN TESTIFY TO THAT.”

There are, in fact, over 150 to choose from and whilst they might be half the size of the conventional layout, they certainly don't lack anything in terms of challenge, enjoyment and appeal.

On average, a nine-hole round of golf should take two people no more than an hour-and-a-half and even less so if it is a par-three course, which many of them are, so it's ideal for those you simply can't afford the time for a full round. Half the number of holes generally means at least half the cost, too, which is great news for those who want to play a round but don't want to have to burn a hole in their pocket.

The Balgove in St Andrews, the St Olaf Course at Cruden Bay and Kingsfield Golf Centre are just a handful of some of the best nine-hole courses you can choose from.

A nine-hole course will also typically have a more relaxed feel to it, making it ideal for those who wish to play in a more laid back environment or wish to introduce golf to their children for the first time.

Simply, there are few better sports to get your kids interested in. Not only does the sport encourage a certain level of behaviour and etiquette which, in turn, instils good values, it teaches honest and good sportsmanship whilst remaining fantastic fun throughout. Perhaps most importantly, it is also good for you. During an average round of golf, a player will walk four to five miles, often across undulating ground. Add the fact that 80 to 100 shots will be hit in the process, and the fact that you will spend around four hours at a time out in the fresh air, it is the perfect pastime for anyone but especially children.

Many golf facilities in the country are staffed by PGA professionals, who are on-hand to offer advice or lessons. Or perhaps you are planning to visit Scotland with your partner or a group of your friends. If so, you couldn't have picked a better place.

Scottish people are well renowned for being a friendly bunch, and it would be fair to suggest that, as well as being the Home of Golf, Scotland could also rightly stake a claim to be considered the home of hospitality. And the 15 million-plus visitors who come to Scotland every year can testify to that.

The so-called '19th hole' is also an essential part of any golf experience in the country. Each clubhouse that you visit has its own unique character and charm, as well as plenty of famous memorabilia and trophies to see up close.

A number of clubs also have their own Starter, who will send you off on your way with a bit of advice and friendly encouragement.

From business trips, to catch-ups with friends and family or just the chance to make new acquaintances, there's nowhere like a Scottish golf course. It truly is a game for all. ✨

CRAFTING SCOTTISH QUALITY SINCE 1891

THE STAGE IS SET...

A bumper schedule of first-class amateur and professional tournament golf is coming to Scotland, the Home of Golf, in 2020.

The 2019 Solheim Cup at Gleneagles was broadcast in over 200 territories worldwide

As well as being a fantastic destination for playing golf, Scotland is also arguably the finest place to watch it, too. Each year, the country's sporting calendar is filled with an abundance of top quality domestic and international golf tournaments that anybody can attend.

Last year's Solheim Cup was the perfect demonstration of that. Arguably the most thrilling edition of the match ever staged, it took place at Gleneagles and saw a crowd of 90,000 people turn out to watch the best female golf professionals from Europe take on their American counterparts – a record attendance for a women's golf event in the UK.

Of course, the beauty of Scotland is that a fantastic golf tournament is never too far away, with 2020 promising a jam-packed schedule of events for you to take in.

The pick of the lot has to be the AIG Women's British Open. One of the five major championships in the ladies' game, it will break new ground this year when it takes place at Royal Troon for the first-ever time.

First staged in 1976, it has been won by many of the greats of the game, amongst them Laura Davies, Karrie Webb, Lorena Ochoa and, of course, Scotland's Catriona Matthew, who claimed the title in 2009.

Japanese star Hinako Shibuno will be the player to beat, having won the championship at Woburn Golf Club in 2019 – her first event outside of Japan. Can the 21-year-old become the first player since Yani Tseng in 2011 to successfully defend the title? We'll find out on the Ayrshire coast in the summer.

The Aberdeen Standard Investments Scottish Open and Ladies' Scottish Open both return to The Renaissance Club in East Lothian in 2020, each having made their debut there in 2019. The men's event has cemented itself as one of the most popular on the European Tour, not to mention one of the most lucrative. Part of the tour's elite cluster of tournaments, it has a whopping $7m prize fund. That, combined with the fact that it provides the perfect opportunity to tune-up ahead of The Open Championship the following week, has made it a 'must play' with many of the game's top players. Rory McIlroy, Justin Thomas, Rickie Fowler, Matt Kuchar and Ian Poulter all played last year, with Austrian Bernd Wiesberger ultimately taking the spoils.

A matter of weeks after the men's event, The Renaissance will welcome some of the world's top female professional golfers when it plays host to the Aberdeen Standard Investments Ladies' Scottish Open. Won in 2019 by Mi Jung Hur of South Korea, the event is co-sanctioned between the Ladies European Tour and LPGA, so has a huge prize fund which always attracts a world-class field.

The Scottish Senior Open, staged at Craighelaw in 2019, is also expected to return to the European Senior Tour schedule in 2020. Former Open champion and two-time Ryder Cup star Paul Lawrie won it last year – his first win in the over-50s’ ranks – to keep up his impressive track record of winning on home soil.

The Alfred Dunhill Links Championship, meanwhile, offers the chance to see both top golfers and an abundance of other well-known faces when it takes place towards the end of the season over three of the most prestigious courses in the country: Old Course at St Andrews, Kingsbarns Golf Links and Carnoustie.

The popular pro-am event has been an annual fixture on the European Tour schedule since 2001, when it replaced the old Alfred Dunhill Cup, and it sees tour pros teaming up with an amateur partner for a round on each of the three aforementioned courses. At the end of those first three rounds, those on the top half of the leaderboard advance for a final round over the Old Course.

Stars from the worlds of sport, music and showbiz love to take part, with ten-time Grammy Award-winning musician Justin Timberlake, Ghostbusters actor Bill Murray and former world heavyweight boxing champion Wladimir Klitschko amongst those to have played in 2019. You can expect another all-star cast to assemble this year, too.

At the opposite end of the professional game, the Scottish Hydro Challenge is expected to return after a hiatus in 2019. It is the ideal place to see tomorrow’s stars up close. Multiple major winner and world No.1 Brooks Koepka is one of its former champions. TlBr

HOW TO PLAY GOLF IN SCOTLAND

Fixing up a tee time on any one of Scotland's spectacular golf courses couldn't be easier - and there are lots of different ways to do so, too.

Anyone who has ever picked up a golf club and built up a relationship with the game dreams of one day making the golfing pilgrimage to St Andrews.

Quite simply, it is the 'Mecca' for all enthusiasts of this great game and with ten courses either in the town or on its outskirts, there's no shortage of playing opportunities available.

So how do you go about playing where and when you want in the 'Auld Grey Toon'? Well, there are three main ways to book: through a registered tour operator; research your itinerary and book the various parts yourself; or a combination of the two by consulting an expert on your itinerary but taking responsibility for booking everything yourself.

Most people choose to use a tour operator, which is perfectly understandable given the number of advantages that offers. For one thing, they arrange golf trips day in and day out, so they have extensive local knowledge and key contacts in all the right places.

They can also save you a huge amount of time in terms of research, take the hassle out of planning the logistics, while they can also recommend what to see and do in the St Andrews area away from the course. They are adaptable enough to cater for all kinds of budgets, too.

Best of all, tour operators aren't as expensive as you might think and, because of their strong relationships and good database of contacts, they can often negotiate very favourable rates.

Should this be the route you want to go down, a good place to start is www.sigtoa.com. The Scottish Incoming Golf Tour Operators Association is a conglomerate of golf tour operators based in Scotland. Others are available. Do some research to find what best suits your needs.

However, going it alone can be equally as fun, especially when it comes to the Old Course. It is notoriously difficult to get a tee time here with two methods of getting on: entering the ballot or queuing.

Nearly half of Old Course tee times each year are allocated to the ballot to give people who have been unable to book a chance of playing. It is drawn 48 hours in advance of play and golfers should provide their names, home club and handicaps either online, by phone or at one of the clubhouses before 2pm, two days before the day they wish to play. To enter there must be a minimum of two and a maximum of four players. The ballot reflects the public spirit of St Andrews Links and its commitment to staying as open and accessible to all golf lovers.

Alternatively, single golfers with suitable handicaps who wish to play the Old Course without an existing tee time should check in at the Old Pavilion on the day of play and the staff will do their best to join them with a two or three-ball group.

There is no obligation on the existing golfers to make up a fourball but common practice is that single golfers are warmly welcomed. With patience, this can be successful but there are no guarantees. Some people have been known to queue from 3am for the chance to secure their place on the hallowed links.

For the other courses that make up St Andrews Links - New, Jubilee, Eden, Castle, Strathryum and Balgove - most tee times can be booked through an online booking system. This is also the same at Fairmont St Andrews and its two courses: the Torrance and Kittocks, while with The Duke's - the course own by the Old Course Hotel - bookings can be made over the phone.

Whichever option you go with, your next golf trip to St Andrews is a whole lot closer than you think. ✂

EXPERIENCE TWO CHAMPIONSHIP COURSES

The Torrance

Designed by former Ryder Cup and golfing legend Sam Torrance, The Torrance course is marked by its deep revetted bunkers, large greens and links design.

It has hosted the Seniors European Tour Event six times between 2009 and 2014, and continues to offer an enjoyable golfing experience.

The Kittocks

The Kittocks Course has been designed by Bruce Devlin, a notable course architect of many famous courses including the Kings Course at Gleneagles and the exclusive Secession club in Beaufort, SC. It's a 72-par course spread upon 5600 – 7191 yards.

The Kittocks is a long and challenging course requiring nerves of steel to navigate its many holes running alongside the coastline. It's famously played host to Europro Tournament 2007 and 2009 and Scottish Youths National Championship 2016.

AYRSHIRE, ARGYLL, THE ISLES, DUMFRIES & GALLOWAY

BIRTHPLACE OF THE OPEN

FEHERTY ON ROYAL TROON...

“On Royal Troon’s back nine, the fairways are notoriously uneven. You don’t get a lie that’s remotely flat, and they’re pretty narrow as well. Then there’s the 11th. That might be the hardest hole on the planet.”

David Feherly

AYRSHIRE

Ayrshire is one of the most historically significant places in the world of golf, and it undoubtedly forms an essential part of any visit to Scotland. As the birthplace of the Open Championship, the region’s reputation as one of the premier stop-offs for golf in Scotland doesn’t need enhanced any further. It was here, back in 1860, that Prestwick Golf Club hosted the very first edition of golf’s most historic championship, and it’s only fitting that some of the game’s most cherished events have taken place in Ayrshire.

Whether it’s the ‘Duel in the Sun’ contested between Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus at Turnberry in 1977, Watson’s heart-breaking play-off defeat to Stewart Cink there 32 years later or Henrik Stenson and Phil Mickelson’s epic clash at Royal Troon in 2016, Ayrshire has captivated audiences for years and this is why visitors return every year in their thousands.

Of course, retracing golf’s history isn’t the only reason to visit this corner of Scotland. There is a seemingly endless supply of stunning courses across the region. Royal Troon is one of two layouts in the region on the Open rota these days, and it would be hard to argue that it isn’t the toughest. The nine-time host of the world’s oldest major is perhaps most famous for its par-3 eighth, better known as the ‘Postage Stamp’. The name stuck after Willie Park referred to the hole as ‘a pitching surface skimmed down to the size of a postage stamp’. Undoubtedly the most famous moment at this hole occurred in 1973, when 71-year-old Gene Sarazen made a hole-in-one, though Phil Mickelson nearly aced it twice during the 2016 Open. “I just love that hole,” said Mickelson, who finished runner-up to Henrik Stenson that year.

Just up the road from Troon is the aforementioned Prestwick, the home of the first Open Championship. Although it hasn’t hosted the Open since 1925, after hosting 24 championships in a 65-year period, only St Andrews has staged golf’s oldest major on more occasions. Four-time major winner Ernie Els is a huge fan, describing it as “one of the best golf experiences in the world”.

The final Open Championship venue in Ayrshire is Trump Turnberry, which is home to two wonderful courses. The Ailsa underwent significant changes at the end of 2015 and re-opened in the summer of 2016 to widespread praise. The alterations included strengthening the turn and transforming the famous Turnberry lighthouse into arguably the most spectacular halfway house in the world. If you can’t get a round on the Ailsa – it is advisable to book in advance – its redeveloped sister course, the King Robert The Bruce, is not to be passed up.

However, world-class golf in the region isn’t just limited to the three venues that have Open pedigree in their lockers – not to mention the fact that they are all located within a relatively short drive of each other - this is an area rich with exceptional golf courses. To be more specific, between the towns of Irvine and Troon, you will come across Western Gailes, Gailes Links, Dundonald Links and Barassie Links.

DID YOU KNOW...

The King Robert the Bruce Course at Trump Turnberry got its name after the King of Scots was born at Turnberry Castle – where the lighthouse now stands – at the end of the 13th century.

US star Rickie Fowler happens to be a big fan of Dundonald Links. “It’s fun to play. A lot of variety on tee shots, not just drivers on every hole. I always love playing over here in Scotland.”

It was at Prestwick in 1914 that Harry Vardon, the most celebrated member of golf’s Great Triumvirate, won his sixth Open – a record haul of golf’s oldest major and a record that still stands to this day. Eleven years later, Prestwick would hold its last ever Open Championship, won by Jim Barnes.

Rickie Fowler

Back in 2017, Dundonald Links ended a wait of 81 years for the Scottish Open to be held in Ayrshire, when Rafa Cabrera Bello came out on top on a course that only opened in 2005 but rose to prominence to become one of the most popular in the region. It has also staged other high profile events, such as the Ladies Scottish Open in 2015 and 2016 and a number of leading amateur events.

Gailes Links is another course not to be missed in this corner of the country. It was opened in 1892 by Glasgow Golf Club, the ninth oldest club in the world, to complement the club’s sister course, Killermont, which is based some 30 miles away in Bearsden, Glasgow. It has staged no fewer than 32 international championships to date, while it hosted Final Open Qualifying for four years from 2014 to 2017. The Willie Park Jnr designed course is a tremendous layout with some of the best greens in Scotland.

Neighbouring Western Gailes is a classic, bumpy links of supreme quality that will certainly test your skills to the limit. It has been visited by the likes of multiple major winners Gary Player and Harry Vardon, and its finest moment was hosting the 1972 Curtis Cup, which was narrowly won by the USA.

The last of this stretch of courses is Barassie Links. It offers everything golfers would expect from a Scottish seaside golf course: challenging fairways, quality greens, humps, hollows and devilish bunkers. The course staged Scottish Open Qualifying in 2017 that earned it rave reviews.

North of Irvine lies Irvine Golf Club, a stunning links crafted by the legendary James Braid, while West Kilbride is another ‘must play’ course in the region and takes the honour as the most northerly of the true links on this coastline. There are a number of standout holes, with many providing exceptional views of the Firth of Clyde and the beautiful Isle of Arran.

The very first course in the UK to be designed by former Ryder Cup captain Colin Montgomerie is Rowallan Castle. It opened in 2009, making it one of Ayrshire’s newest layouts, and is located near Kilmarnock. It is one of the finest inland tracks in the area and proves that great golf in the region is by no means confined to the coast.

Another great example is Belleisle in Ayr. Originally opened in 1927, it is one of the finest public courses in the country and, like its neighbour Seafield, has benefited significantly from large-scale investment in recent years.

Maybole, Dalmilling and Girvan are three other highly-respected municipal courses to tee up in this part of Scotland, proving that golf in this corner of the country provides options for all budgets. Ardeer, meanwhile, is an understated gem of the highest order and dates back back to 1880, making it one of Ayrshire’s oldest clubs. It describes itself as ‘deceptively demanding’, which is very apt. With many of the fairways flanked by trees, it is, indeed, an accurate portrayal – but the engrossing views across the Firth of Clyde provide the perfect trade-off.

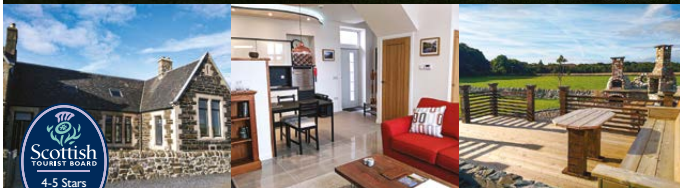

That really is just the tip of the iceberg for a region that is, quite simply, littered with options for world-class golf. In truth, this is a corner of the country that offers something for absolutely every visiting golfer who wants to experience the very best of Scotland. ❧

DID YOU KNOW...

The man who redesigned The Machrie, DJ Russell, says he's proud of the outcome. "It's been an amazing experience and I'm excited at what we have achieved."

Fancy playing a true throwback? Try Machrihanish Dunes, designed by David McLay Kidd, who said of his design: "We are returning golf to how it should be played."

Respected TV presenter Eilidh Barbour loves golf and says her favourite course is Shiskine on the Isle of Arran, describing it as "quirky but beautiful".

Machrihanish Dunes

ARGYLL & THE ISLES

Discover the dramatic and rugged Argyll landscape, an area that's sparsely populated - except for golf courses.

Argyll & The Isles is a region that takes some beating in terms of drama and raw, natural beauty, and many of the golf courses blend perfectly into the contours of the rugged landscape.

The area comprises large parts of westernmost Scotland, in particular to the north west of Glasgow, south to the furthest extremity of the Kintyre Peninsula and north as far as Oban and across to Loch Lomond & The Trossachs National Park. It is sparsely populated but, nonetheless, is home to a spectacular collection of wonderful tests of golf.

If you head south, close to Campbeltown, you'll find two of the finest courses in the region: Machrihanish & Machrihanish Dunes.

Machrihanish Golf Club is a widely acclaimed links and has gained international recognition for the quality of its opening hole, as the club describe it as 'the best opening hole in the world'. It plays across the corner of a beach and the waves of the Atlantic Ocean. You will struggle to find a more dramatic, and tougher, start to a round of golf. Unfortunately, the club lost its clubhouse in a devastating fire at the end of 2018, but the course is still open and the club is confident of moving into a new building by the end of the year.

It is not to be confused with the neighbouring Machrihanish Dunes, which opened in 2008, becoming the first true links to be built on the west coast for over 100 years. However, it has the look of a layout that has been around for much longer thanks to excellent design that only required tees and greens to be built from scratch.

Dunaverty, Tarbert and Carradale are other courses you should add to your list. The same applies to Glencruitten – home to Scottish star Robert MacIntyre – as well as the likes of Taynuilt and Tobermory.

Moving away from the mainland towards the many islands lying just off the Argyll coast, the experiences keep on coming. The pick of the bunch would have to be Arran, home to seven courses. The island is only an hour on the ferry from Ardrossan, and Shiskine is arguably the most well known course, a 12-hole gem that sits at the foot of the Drumadoon Cliff. It is a regular inclusion on lists of the UK's top 100 courses. The Machrie, on the Isle of Islay, has recently been renovated by former tour pro DJ Russell and is not to be missed.

It is fair to say that Argyll & The Isles is truly one of Scotland's most underrated golf destinations. ❄️

Machrie Golf Links

DUMFRIES & GALLOWAY

From championship links to hidden inland gems, Dumfries & Galloway has something for every golfer.

Dumfries & Galloway is exactly what you look for in a great golf destination, but for one reason or another it flies under the radar in Scottish golf. Its rolling hills, 200 miles of spectacular coastline and temperate microclimate combine to make perfect conditions for playing the game, and the perfect canvas for golf course designers, of course.

From James Braid to Mackenzie Ross and Willie Fernie, some of the most illustrious and recognisable names in golf course design have contributed to the 30-plus layouts that lie in wait. From championship links, to inland gems, to nine-hole treats, to courses laid out along dramatic cliff-tops, there's a bit of everything for you to enjoy.

Southernness is the most celebrated course in the region, and is a terrific place to start. Its classic 18-hole links overlooks the Solway Firth and has staged many high-profile tournaments since it opened for play in 1947. For example, the Scottish Amateur Championship has been played there on three occasions, most recently in 2015. It is considered to be one of the toughest tests in the country, measuring more than 6,500 yards with a par of 69. Understandably, it regularly features in lists of the best courses in the UK and is a must visit in this region.

Dumfries & Galloway Golf Club, meanwhile, is where the aforementioned Willie Fernie played much of his golf around the turn of the 20th century. It is a formidable but fair test from start to finish.

Thornhill is another classic course. Located just a short drive north on Dumfries on the A76, it is home to a magnificent blend of parkland and heathland. Incidentally, it is also where a young Andrew Coltart started playing golf. He would go on to win multiple European Tour titles as well as go toe-to-toe with US star Tiger Woods in the 1999 Ryder Cup.

In the south west corner of this region is Stranraer, famed for being the last of James Braid's course designs, combined with stunning views towards Ailsa Craig and the Isle of Arran.

Next door is Portpatrick, a picturesque town that is home to two fantastic courses. The 18-hole Dunskey is a charming layout set on rolling moorland and seaside heathland, while the nine-hole Dinvin is the perfect complement. Time spent in Portpatrick is time well spent.

Last but by no means least, try your hand at the brilliant St Medan, Scotland's most southerly golf course. For that reason alone, it is worth a visit.

Leave the driving for the golf course.

We fly to more Scottish airports than any other airline - perfect for a golfing break.

PHIL THE ARCHITECT

It should almost be a prerequisite to play Castle Stuart before you're allowed to design golf courses nowadays.

Phil Mickelson

INVERNESS & MORAY

With a selection of world-class championship courses, beautiful yet enchanting scenery and more flights into Inverness than ever before, the Highlands is rightly considered a true hotbed for exploring golf in Scotland.

In addition, it has transformed itself into a centre for high-profile golf tournaments. The Scottish Open, Curtis Cup, Walker Cup and Scottish Hydro Challenge are just some of the many events to have been held in and around Inverness and Moray in the last 20 years.

Unquestionably, one of the most popular courses in the region is Castle Stuart Golf Links, which is only a 15-minute drive east of the capital of the Highlands. Designed by Gil Hanse and the late Mark Parsinen, it only opened in 2009 but has already had a significant impact on the international stage as a regular host of the Scottish Open. It has now staged the event on four occasions, most recently in 2016 when Alex Noren took the title. Phil Mickelson, Scottish Open winner in 2013 at Castle Stuart, is a huge fan: "I think it's got a great mix of holes. I loved it even before I played well there."

It is by no means the only quality course in the region though. Only a short drive along the A96 will take you to Nairn Golf Club, venue for the 1999 Walker Cup and 2012 Curtis Cup. It is the perfect links golf combination, as it provides a firm test of golf with fabulous views throughout.

Similarly, Nairn Dunbar is worth a visit while you're there. This 120-year-old course is renowned for having some of the best greens in the north of Scotland. This stretch of coastline has a never-ending list of top courses to play that also includes Forres, Kinloss Country, Cullen and Hopeman.

At Moray Golf Club, meanwhile, you can choose between two fantastic layouts. The Old, designed by Old Tom Morris, bears all the hallmarks of a classic links and it's a truly special course. The New is shorter in length but by no means less challenging. Thirty six holes across these two will complete a perfect day of golf.

Other highly recommended courses to play are Boat of Garten, a beauty designed by the great James Braid, and the Spey Valley Course in Aviemore, which is a classic inland championship test, complemented by fantastic views of the Cairngorms National Park. ❧

Fortrose & Rosemarkie

DID YOU KNOW...

Although the club wasn't formed until 1877, there are written records showing that golf was played at Royal Dornoch as far back as 1616, making it the world's oldest golf course, behind St Andrews and Leith.

Brora is 194 acres of classic Scottish links golf in all its glory - and it also happens to be the headquarters of the James Braid Golfing Society.

Skibo Castle, near Dornoch, is home to a special pizza oven that's worth £30,000 and cooks your pizza from raw in under four minutes.

James Braid

NORTH OF INVERNESS

Venture to the northernmost parts of British mainland and uncover some of Scotland's best gems.

The Northern Highlands is considered one of the most visually captivating and beautiful parts of Scotland. It is sparsely populated but it's now teeming with tourists thanks to the North Coast 500. But venture north of the self-styled 'Capital of the Highlands' with your golf clubs and you will discover some of the home of golf's most picturesque and enthralling layouts.

There's no better place to start than Royal Dornoch Golf Club, the northernmost club in the UK to have 'Royal' status. Only an hour's drive north of Inverness, the Championship Course at Royal Dornoch regularly ranks in the top 10 of Golf Digest's 'World's 100 Greatest Courses', most recently coming in fifth, the highest place for a course in Scotland. Five-time Open winner Tom Watson would certainly agree, as he declared it 'the most fun I've ever had playing golf' - quite a commendation. The shorter Struie Course, meanwhile, is the perfect complement to its big sister.

One of the finest tests of golf in the Highlands is surely Fortrose & Rosemarkie. It is contained fully within the Chanonry Peninsula, a long, narrow headland that juts out onto the water, and it sits on the opposite side of the Moray Firth, from the likes of Castle Stuart and Nairn. There is reference to golf being played at Fortrose & Rosemarkie as far back as 1702, but it was not until 1889 that a golf club was established. The road to the lighthouse divides the course in two, and there is just enough land to accommodate this stunning course.

Another 'must play' course is the Carnegie Links at the Skibo Castle estate. It confidently describes itself as 'Heaven on Earth' and, if you've played here before, you simply can't disagree. The only tricky part is actually teeing it up there, as it's one of the most exclusive courses in the country with only a handful of tee times available each week. It is well worth the effort, though.

Travel up the east coast from Royal Dornoch and you will come across Golspie. Widely recognised for its award-winning beaches, the town is also home to a superb 18-hole course. It is the perfect combination of links, heath and parkland. Then there's Brora, a jewel in James Braid's crown where a number of the holes play along the coastline in this magnificent seascape.

Tain is another sublime Old Tom Morris links and, if you factor in Durness, Strathpeffer Spa and Thurso, you are guaranteed a golf trip of the very highest order. ☘

After enjoying a round of golf at Westray Golf Club, on one of the Orkney islands, why not take a flight to nearby Papa Westray and experience the world's shortest known commercial flight. Remarkably, you are airborne for only two minutes.

The Orkney Islands

After enjoying a round at either Orkney Golf Club or Stromness Golf Club on the mainland of Orkney, why not pay a visit to neolithic Skara Brae at the Bay of Skail? It is reckoned to date back to 3,000 BC!

NORTHERN ISLES & THE HEBRIDES

Head for the islands to discover that exceptional courses in Scotland are by no means confined to the mainland.

Scotland is surrounded by a vast network of almost 800 islands that are scattered around its sprawling coastline. Most of these can be found in the Northern Isles and the Hebrides and, what's more, a significant number of them are home to their very own golf courses. As if Scotland didn't already appeal as the perfection place for a golf holiday.

One of the most famous and popular of the island courses is to be found on South Uist, the second largest island of the Outer Hebrides - and its fame comes via the incredible story behind its golf course. Askernish originally opened in 1891, having been designed by the great Old Tom Morris, but it was abandoned in the 1920s and used as an airstrip in the 1930s. However, in 2006, it rose from the ashes through a major rejuvenation project and now closely resembles the original design. Renowned golf architect Martin Ebert has described it as a 'living golf course museum', providing the most natural links you could ever wish to play. This is a truly historic place to play.

Orkney, an archipelago of 70 islands, provides five courses to choose from, of which Orkney Golf Club is the best renowned, sitting outside the town of Kirkwall. It's a tight, challenging course that's wonderful to play, particularly on a clear day when the views stretch across the town and out towards several islands.

Stromness is another enjoyable course, which is less than a half-hour drive from Kirkwall. It is laid out on the water's edge and overlooks the splendid, hilly island of Hoy. It is a fun course and also would allow a fourball to play in under three hours, which is perfect timing to explore the rest of the island.

Take a north-easterly bearing from Orkney and you will eventually arrive in Shetland, which boasts four courses. Of these, Whalsay is arguably the most popular with visitors, as it has the added attraction of being the most northerly golf course in the British Isles. Other excellent options include Shetland Golf Club or the nine-hole Asta course.

Another memorable experience will take place on the Isle of Skye, where a nine-hole course nestles between Cuillin Mountains and the Isle of Raasay. Benbecula is also well worth a visit, as is Barra.

A venture away from the mainland of Scotland will offer you so many more fantastic golf courses that you would ever have imagined. ❌

ABERDEEN CITY & SHIRE

A STAR IN THE MAKING

'IT'S JUST MAGNIFICENT'

Royal Aberdeen is magnificent. The condition of it is just second to none. It's an old-fashioned course where it humps and haws and bumps. You've got to be accurate here. The eighth hole is a beautiful little par-3. I love short, little par-3s that, when the wind blows, it could be as much as a 4-iron. If the wind blows, it's an unbelievably tough test.

Paul Lawrie

ABERDEEN CITY & SHIRE

Whilst the city of Aberdeen is probably better known for granite and oil, its reputation as fantastic golf destination is growing year and after year – and with good reason.

Aberdeen is a wonderful, modern city that caters for all tastes and budgets. Add in its rich and proud history, not to mention the fact that there are over 20 courses within a ten-mile radius of the city centre, and you have one of the best golfing destinations to visit in the country.

Where better to begin your adventures than the sixth oldest golf club in the world? Royal Aberdeen Golf Club was founded in 1780, then known as The Society of Golfers at Aberdeen, before changing to its current name 35 years later. There are two fantastic links layouts for you to tackle: the Balgownie and the Silverburn.

The former is the more senior course and is considered to be one of the truest links layouts in all of golf. It has hosted numerous prestigious tournaments down the years, including the 2014 Scottish Open, won by former US Open champion Justin Rose. The front nine is particularly special for those visiting for the first time. The Silverburn, meantime, is the perfect complement to its big sister.

The highly acclaimed Trump International Golf Links Scotland can be found just a few miles further up the coast. The first European golf property developed by US president Donald Trump, this fabulous modern style links opened to rave reviews in 2012 and has grown in stature ever since.

Sandwiched between Royal Aberdeen and Trump International is Murcar Links. A regular feature on lists of the top 100 courses in the UK, it hosted its first European Tour event in 2015, the inaugural Paul Lawrie Match Play. It is a classic links in every respect. The same can be said of Balnagask and King's Links, both of which are a stone's throw from Aberdeen city centre, whilst Auchmill is another hugely enjoyable layout. The closing hole, a 459-yard par-4 that averages 6.11 amongst the club's members, is generally regarded as one of the toughest in the country.

Last but not least, make sure Portlethen is on your itinerary. It is a course that requires pinpoint accuracy throughout, not least because the Findon Burn comes into play on a number of holes. Watch out for the club's signature hole, the 15th, in particular.

With world-class championship links and the third largest city in Scotland as your base, it's about time you checked out all that Aberdeen has to offer. 🏌️‍♂️

Fraserburgh

DID YOU KNOW...

The BBC golf commentator Peter Alliss is a fan of the Hawkshill course at Newmachar. The 'Voice of Golf' enjoyed it so much, in fact, that he once said it is 'destined to become one of the top five inland courses in Britain'.

Do you think you've got what it takes to set a new course record at Inverallochy Golf Club? The low mark at the club has stood for a number of years at an incredible ten-under 57, having been posted by former Scotland internationalist and ex Walker Cup player Steven Young.

Peter Alliss

NORTH OF ABERDEEN

Travel north of the 'Granite City' to acquaint yourself with the vast array of incredible courses that await your arrival.

One of the most remote regions in Scotland, the area directly north of Aberdeen is blessed with natural beauty and stunning scenery. As a result of this, it is also home to some magnificent courses that match the beautiful beaches and rolling fields.

One of the best places to start would be walking along a piece of true Scottish golf history, and you can do that by teeing it up at Fraserburgh Golf Club.

Founded in 1777, there are few layouts older than the Corbiehill Course - and there are arguably not many better. It's fair to say that it is an 18-hole masterpiece that sits within the rugged dunes that frame Fraserburgh bay. Its sister course, the Rosehill, is a wonderful nine-hole track.

Another course that comes highly recommended is Cruden Bay. It opened at the end of the 19th century to coincide with the development of the Great North of Scotland Railway. Its championship layout demands power, placement and judgement to plot your way around it. The nine-hole St Olaf Course is a great option if you are perhaps short on time.

Travel further up the coast and you will find Peterhead Golf Club. Its Craigewan Links was originally laid out by Willie Park Jr in 1892 and remains one of the most popular places to play in the North East. Just ask Tiger Woods' former coach Butch Harmon. The American described it as a 'real hidden gem' when he played there back in 2005.

Visit the delightful seaside town of Macduff and you will have the opportunity to play Royal Tarlair, which is perched on top of cliffs overlooking the Moray Firth. It is hard to decide what provides a more memorable experience: the terrific course or the breathtaking views.

Inverurie is another course that should be at the top of your list. Its 18-hole course is maintained to the highest standards and it incorporates tree-lined fairways and lashings of gorse and broom for good measure.

Other clubs well worth visiting include the 36-hole Newmachar, Rosehearty and Huntly, but wherever you choose to play, you are guaranteed to enjoy it. ❧

"A Hidden Jewel"

A short distance from the North East's top courses, this par 72 Championship Links Course demands accurate golf from tee to green, with exceptional views over the Ythan Estuary and Forvie Natural Nature Reserve.

DID YOU KNOW...

Legend has it that Aboyne Golf Club was a particular favourite of the British Royal Family back in the early 20th century. It was, in fact, reported that King Edward VIII was fond of it and would spend large parts of holidays at nearby Balmoral playing there.

One of the shortest holes in Scottish golf awaits visitors to Banchory. 'Doo'cot', the 16th hole on the course, measures only 88 yards and takes its name from an old pigeon loft, which sits to the left side of the elevated green. Salvage par and you'll be doing well.

Banchory

SOUTH & WEST OF ABERDEEN

The South & West of Aberdeen may be the Scottish home of the Royal Family but it is also the home of some picturesque parkland courses.

Home to Balmoral Castle, the Royal Family's Scottish summer retreat, it goes without saying that the region to the south and west of Aberdeen is a particularly special part of Scotland. The same could also be said if you happen to be a golfer, with a number of fantastic courses to enjoy.

Rising in the Cairngorms next to Ben Macdui – the tallest peak in the UK's largest national park – and meandering through Strathdee to its North Sea estuary at Aberdeen Harbour, the Dee flows past notable landmarks such as Balmoral and Braemar Castle, but it is the golf courses that are of greatest interest here.

The first course the Dee passes on its way into Aberdeen is Braemar. At just over 1,200 feet above sea level, it is the highest 18-hole course in Scotland so you can expect stunning views in addition to a firm test of golf. It is an ever-popular destination with holidaymakers and golf societies and, given its location in the heart of the Cairngorms National Park, it's easy to see why.

Then there's Banchory. The Dee also flows through this hilly, parkland layout, and is just one of a number of hazards you have to negotiate. It was here that a young Paul Lawrie, the 1999 Open champion, learnt his trade working as an assistant to Doug Smart in the early days of his professional career. It is a relatively short course but is full of character and charm.

Further downstream, you'll find Ballater, which is located opposite the grounds of Balmoral. A fine mix of heathland and parkland that runs alongside the river on many holes, the course is especially renowned for the quality of its par-3s. The 13th is a particular highlight. It is a fun course from start to finish.

Deeside Golf Club dates back to the early 20th century and is one of the North East's foremost golf facilities, with the original nine-hole layout believed to have been opened in 1903. The 18-hole Houghton and nine-hole Blairs are two terrific courses.

Last but not least, no trip to this part of the world would be complete without a visit to Stonehaven. The dramatic links features breath-taking clifftop views and is simply a stunning place to play.

FIFE, PERTSHIRE, DUNDEE & ANGUS

THE KINGDOM OF GOLF AWAITS

'IT'S A SPECIAL TOWN'

If you're driving into St Andrews for the first time and you see all of the buildings, it's filled with so much history and atmosphere. There's just something that's special about this town, and so that's why I think you get people coming here and really having a good time. It's always been special to me.

Trevor Immelman

FIFE

For golfers all around the world, Fife is golfing paradise, plain and simple. Affectionately known as The 'Kingdom of Fife', no visit to Scotland is complete without paying a visit to this magnificent and historic region. Located between the Firths of Forth and Tay, with inland boundaries to Perth & Kinross and Clackmannanshire, it's widely accepted that this is where golf was born, dating back several centuries. As a result, thousands upon thousands of tourists from across the globe head here to not only enjoy a taste of history, but more importantly, play some of the best golf courses the world has to offer.

The sheer volume and quality of golf available in the region is beyond compare. From some of the most famous and iconic 18-hole layouts in the game, to the less heralded but no less exciting tracks, to nine-hole hidden gems, it's no exaggeration to say that Fife has got the lot.

Naturally, St Andrews is the centre of golf in Fife, as it's the acclaimed birthplace of the game and where people have been playing the sport since the early 15th century. Golf is everywhere you go in and around the town. There are no less than seven different courses operated by St Andrews Links in the town itself. These are headlined by the Old Course, of course, which is the oldest golf course in the world and will host its 30th Open Championship next year on the 150th anniversary of golf's oldest major.

Everywhere you look in the 'Auld Grey Toon' there are links to golf in the shape of pubs, restaurants and shops, and the Old Course isn't the only reason why golfers flock here. Nearby you will find the New, Jubilee, Eden, Strathtyrum and Balgove courses, while the Castle Course – the newest addition to the St Andrews portfolio – opened in 2008 and boasts a stunning clifftop location overlooking St Andrews.

Just a 15-minute drive from the town centre, you will come across Kingsbarns Golf Links. Hugging the North Sea coastline, it appears in most lists of the world's best courses – and there isn't a single person who will disagree with its lofty status. It opened back in 2000 and has since hosted the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship alongside the Old Course and Carnoustie - but perhaps its biggest moment was in 2017, when it hosted its first major, the RICOH Women's British Open.

Located perfectly between Kingsbarns and the Old Course is the Fairmont St Andrews Resort, which has two excellent courses: the Torrance and the Kittocks. The former was, unsurprisingly, co-designed by former Ryder Cup winning captain Sam Torrance and has staged high-profile events such as the Scottish Senior Open. It's an exceptional test of golf.

Further afield from Fife, you must pay a visit to the East Neuk. 'Neuk' is the old Scots word for 'corner' and it perfectly sums up this delightful piece of Fife coastline. It's not only home to a host of bustling fishing villages and picturesque scenery - it's also the location of some fantastic golf layouts, the most historic being Crail Golfing Society. It is the seventh oldest golf club in the world and is home to two brilliant links: the Balcomie and Craighead Links.

DID YOU KNOW...

US swimmer Michael Phelps has another record to add to his resume. He holed the longest televised putt in history at Kingsbarns during the 2012 Dunhill Links. Phelps drained his putt from 159 feet (that's 53 yards) on the par-4 sixth for an unlikely eagle two.

You'll see a quite extraordinary sight at the Golf House Club, Elie. Towering some 10 m above the new starter's hut at the Fife links is a periscope, salvaged from HMS Excalibur in 1966. It was presented to the club by a member and is always a talking point. It gives the starter a "perfect" view of the first hill.

The Balcomie has been described as 'one of Scotland's most finely polished golfing gems', a feeling that is echoed by all those who walk its fairways. Although the Craighead Links opened in 1998, it is a very much a fun sister course.

Leven Links is also close by and has deservedly earned its place among Scotland's top courses. It has everything that is required to be regarded as a 'classic' links: tight fairways, pot bunkers and large, fast-running greens. The neighbouring Lundin Links is just as special. Designed by Old Tom Morris and reworked by James Braid in the early 20th century, it is renowned for the quality of its greens and the strength of the par-4s, along with open burns and an internal out of bounds created by the old railway line. Simply brilliant.

Only a few minutes drive away you will find Elie, where it is believed that golf has been played as far back as the 15th century. The late five-time Open champion Peter Thomson was a huge fan of Elie's set-up and said: "It's quirky and the most enjoyable course I know. If I had my way, I'd build Elies all over the world."

Moving away from links, courses such as Scotsraig, Ladybank and The Duke's at St Andrews act as proof that Fife delivers on any type of golf that you could wish for.

Scotsraig, which is part-links, part-heathland, is the 13th oldest club in the world and is a course that you simply cannot afford to miss. It is a course where accuracy is considerably more important than length.

Meanwhile, Ladybank is maintained to the highest of standards and is thoroughly deserving of its reputation of one of the best inland courses in Scotland. It staged Senior Open Qualifying back in 2018 to great acclaim.

The Duke's, owned by the famous Old Course Hotel, is the only non-links in St Andrews but is arguably one of the toughest in the home of golf. Although it measures a daunting 7,512 yards, it has five tee boxes that allow golfers of any ability to enjoy a round. It was revamped a few years ago and boasts waste-area bunkers similar to US Ryder Cup venue Whistling Straits.

Although St Andrews is the home of golf, it is far from the biggest town in 'The Kingdom'. That accolade goes to Dunfermline, with Kirkcaldy not far behind, and there are plenty of golfing delights to enjoy here, too.

Dunfermline offers the likes of Pitreavie – designed by Alister MacKenzie of Augusta National fame – Dunfermline Golf Club and Saline. Kirkcaldy, meanwhile, has the excellent challenges of Dunnikier Park and Kirkcaldy itself.

The likes of Drumoig - just outside St Andrews - Aberdour and Charleton also deliver proof that Fife has got the lot. The latter, incidentally, was opened by the 41st President of the USA, George H.W. Bush, in 1994.

Home to over 40 different courses, as well as some of the most fascinating aspects of the game's history, a golf trip to Fife simply can't be bettered. ❄️

Welcome to Carnoustie Country

Scotland's most exciting golf destination

V&A image ©HuftonCrow

Carnoustie Country, on the east coast of Scotland, is a must visit destination for all to experience.

With over 30 courses including some of the finest championship links and inland courses in Scotland, you'll be spoilt for choice. The stunning Angus coastline has many historical links which have been here for hundreds of years. Or step a little further inland to be surrounded by beautifully preserved parkland and heathland courses steeped in majestic countryside.

Come and experience a unique mix of vibrant city culture in Dundee along with breath-taking countryside and coastline in Angus. Enjoy a visit to V&A Dundee, the only design museum outside of London, as well as a bracing hike in the stunning Angus Glens.

There are also a number of amazing places to eat and drink – sample some of the finest local food and drink Scotland has to offer with everything from mouth watering Aberdeen Angus beef and our famous Arbroath Smokies, to a warming local whisky or vodka.

Located only 45 minutes from St Andrews, and little over an hour away from Aberdeen and Edinburgh airports, Carnoustie Country is the perfect golfing getaway.

Forfar

DID YOU KNOW...

At Carnoustie, make sure you take some time to visit the Simpsons Golf Shop. It is believed to be the second oldest golf shop in the world, having opened back in 1883. You can buy a Simpson-branded hickory club or putter bearing the Robert Simpson stamp.

Make sure you tick off Panmure Golf Club as this is where Ben Hogan geared up for his one and only Open appearance in 1953. He spent two weeks playing Panmure before going on to win at Carnoustie for his only Open victory.

DUNDEE & ANGUS

From championship links to some of the best inland courses in the UK, this stunning part of Scotland will leave you wanting more.

As the fourth largest city in Scotland, it should come as no surprise that Dundee and the surrounding area is home to a large concentration of great courses. Although it is often overshadowed by its neighbours to the south, Fife, there are 34 beautiful courses all within an hour's drive of one another. Not only that, but it's an area that's extremely rich in golf history.

Most of the attention focuses on Carnoustie and there is no better place to start your trip to the 'City of Discovery' than by paying a visit to the seven-time Open Championship venue. Twelve miles east of Dundee, its championship links dates back to 1842. Old Tom Morris extended the original ten-hole layout in 1867 and, in 1931, it hosted the Open Championship for the very first time. Don't be put off by its bruising reputation. This is a brilliant championship links, with one of the very best finishes in world golf - and the welcome is typically Scottish.

Also on offer at Carnoustie Golf Links are the Burnside and Buddon courses, both of which have been the subject of significant upgrades recently and offer excellent links tests.

Just two miles down the road is Panmure, the perfect blend of links and heathland. It is the course where Ben Hogan practised ahead of his one and only Open appearance in 1953 (which he won). Panmure is always beautifully presented and offers a classic links set-up close to the village of Barry.

Monifieth, meanwhile, is where another American legend - Tom Watson - first experienced playing links golf before going on to become a five-time Open Championship winner. The Medal Course is a must-play for all golf fanatics, with its deep revetted bunkers and meandering burns.

Montrose Golf Links is a fantastic place to play with the added draw of two courses to play, the 1562 Course and the Broomfield. The 1562 Course is the fifth oldest golf course in the world and was renamed in a bid to recognise the significant role played by the ancient east coast course in world golf.

North of Carnoustie, there's the traditional links layout of Arbroath, with open fairways and greens surrounded by deep, penal bunkers. Then there's Downfield, one of the finest inland tracks in the UK. Just a short drive from the centre of Dundee, it's every bit of enjoyable as a classic links.

The late five-time Open champion Peter Thomson once remarked that Downfield's greens were 'especially pure', and that he had 'not played on better groomed fairways'. ❌

Gleneagles, The King's

Auchterarder

Alyth

DID YOU KNOW...

On the outskirts of Perth you'll find King James VI, the only self-contained river island golf course in the whole of the UK. It is, in fact, one of the very few courses in the world to have that characteristic.

Another 'gem' worth visiting is Edradour, the smallest traditional whisky distillery in Scotland, which opened back in 1825.

When the Gleneagles Hotel opened in 1924 it was described as 'a Riviera in the Highlands' and 'the eighth wonder of the world'. It is packed full of history and its King's and Queen's were designed by James Braid and were built by horse and cart.

Gleneagles Hotel

PERTHSHIRE

The 'Big County' is situated at the very heart of Scotland and has an abundance of extraordinary courses for you to choose from.

Positioned at the historic and geographic heart of Scotland, Perthshire is the only wholly landlocked region in this guide. However, that doesn't mean that it lacks any in terms of fabulous golf courses for you to enjoy. It is quite the opposite, in fact.

Perthshire extends from Strathmore in the east, to the Pass of Drumochter in the north, Rannoch Moor and Ben Lui in the west, and Aberfoyle in the south. It certainly proves that the best of Scottish golf is by no means restricted to the coast.

Understandably, Gleneagles will be top of the agenda for most people visiting this region. The host of the acclaimed Ryder Cup in 2014 – and venue for last year's Solheim Cup – Gleneagles owns four superb courses. It has three 18-hole championship courses: King's, Queen's and the PGA Centenary, which hosted the matches between Europe and USA. The King's, meanwhile, is up there with the best moorland courses in the world, and the shorter Queen's is even more beautiful. The par-3 Academy Course is also fantastic for newcomers.

However, it's worth bearing in mind that the region is home to over 30 terrific layouts, including the two courses at Blairgowrie: the Rosemount and the Lansdowne. Located within a tranquil part of the countryside, the club has played host to a number of high-profile tournaments including Greg Norman's first-ever professional win back in 1977. Combine this with the fact that it's only half an hour's drive north of Perth and Blairgowrie is widely regarded as having one of the finest clubhouses in the country, it's a must visit.

Located just outside Perth, Murrayshall has another pair of excellent courses to choose from. The championship course provides a stern test of golf, whilst the shorter Lynedoch course allows you to get in a quick knock if short on time.

Auchterarder, which backs onto Gleneagles, is extremely popular, particularly for its stunning views towards Glendevon and the Ochil Hills, and is a real pleasure to play.

The likes of Alyth and Crieff's superb Ferntower Course also come highly recommended, as does Pitlochry, which is home to some of the most dramatic and spectacular views in Scotland.

Perthshire is also home to its fair share of sublime nine-hole courses, with Killin, Blair Atholl and St Fillans amongst the pick of the bunch, with the latter being a particular favourite of two-time major winner Sandy Lyle.

Isn't it about time you got to know these fantastic Perthshire courses a little better? ✂

EDINBURGH, THE LOTHIANS AND THE SCOTTISH BORDERS

EXPLORE SCOTLAND'S

GARY PLAYER LOVES EAST LOTHIAN!

“Golf in East Lothian is something every enthusiast should experience. It’s unique in the world due to its concentration of fantastic courses dotted along one very picturesque coastline. It’s really no wonder it’s known as Scotland’s Golf Coast.”

Gary Player

EAST LOTHIAN

East Lothian refers to itself as ‘Scotland’s Golf Coast’, so therefore it is not unreasonable to have pretty high expectations of the region. Fortunately, for those visitors who come in search of unforgettable golf experiences, it routinely delivers – and it does emphatically so, time and time again.

Extending along a 40-mile stretch of coastline, from Musselburgh to Dunbar, East Lothian has the distinction of being officially the sunniest part of Scotland, with an average of 1,400 hours of sunshine per year. Combine this with no fewer than 15 world-class links courses in such a tightly packed area, there is no doubt that you are in for a true golfing treat in this part of the world.

Overall, there are more than 20 great courses to choose from and where better to start than Gullane Golf Club, which is home to three of them. The club became the first in East Lothian to host the Scottish Open back in 2014, which was a massive success. In 2018, it hosted both the Men’s and Ladies’ Scottish Open, the latter being co-sanctioned by the LPGA and LET. Gullane No.1 is the biggest pull of the trio, while No.2 offers a strategic test of your links skills. No.3 may be shorter, but it’s no slouch. The great golf writer Bernard Darwin once described the view from atop Gullane Hill as ‘one of the most beautiful spots in the world’.

Head through the town and you will come across Muirfield, a legendary links that needs no introduction. It last staged the Open back in 2013 when Phil Mickelson won his only Claret Jug after a pulsating week of classic Open golf. Only St Andrews and Prestwick have hosted the oldest major in golf on more occasions. Muirfield is extremely unique, as it was the first course to be designed with two concentric rings of nine holes, ensuring that the wind hits you from all directions. If you are lucky enough to get a tee time, it is well worth it.

North Berwick

Craigielaw

Kilspindie

DID YOU KNOW...

Longniddry has the honour of being worked on by not one but four famous golf course architects. Harry Colt designed the course before it was later tweaked by James Braid, Philip Mackenzie Ross and Donald Steel.

Recent European Solheim Cup-winning captain Catriona Matthew is a huge fan of her home region. "There are so many golf courses in East Lothian it's ridiculous," said Matthew.

Catriona Matthew

East of Muirfield lies the Archerfield Estate, which houses three courses: Archerfield's Fidra and Dirleton layouts, as well as the 2019 Scottish Open host venue The Renaissance Club, which is another recent addition to the East Lothian golfing menu – and only further enhances the reputation of the area.

Located next door to The Renaissance Club is North Berwick, which sits on the fringes of the Firth of Forth and affords stunning views across to Bass Rock and Craigleith Island. Founded in 1832, North Berwick is the 13th oldest golf club in the world and, perhaps even more significantly, the third oldest still playing over its original fairways.

The oldest is, of course, the Old Course at St Andrews, but the second oldest can also be found in East Lothian – Musselburgh Links. It is fair to say that it is one of the most historic clubs in the world, as evidence shows that the game has been played there as far back as 1672. It also has the distinction of being a former Open Championship venue, having staged the tournament six times between 1874 and 1889. Do you need any other reason to visit?

Longniddry, Aberlady and Kilspindie are other 'must play' courses – the latter's eighth hole, a dramatic par-three that plays across the corner of Aberlady Bay, is one of the most photographed in the region. Craigielaw, meanwhile, opened in 2001 and provides an excellent test of a modern, championship links and has hosted many top events.

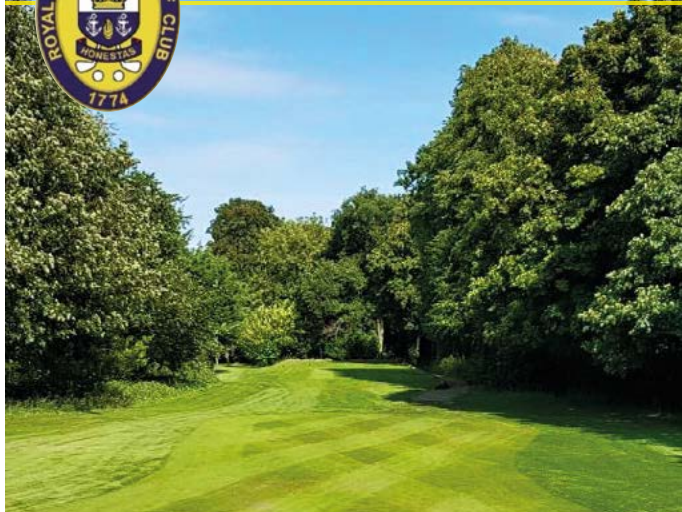

Further down the coast, Dunbar is one of the country's most underrated tracks. Contained primarily within a narrow strip of land where golf has been played for over 150 years, the stretch of holes from the fourth to the 17th are extremely special. The nearby Winterfield is a true hidden gem of a course, with spectacular views greeting you at almost every hole.

If you head inland and away from the coast, the likes of Castle Park, Gifford and Royal Musselburgh are proof that there is much more to East Lothian than links courses. Indeed, Royal Musselburgh is the fifth oldest club in the world and its Old Club Cup is the oldest trophy played for in the world, having been first awarded in 1774.

With so much great golf to explore, all within easy reach of Edinburgh, the allure of East Lothian cannot be overstated. ❄️

Royal Musselburgh Golf Club

Located at the start of the famous stretch of golf courses on the East Lothian coast, a warm welcome is guaranteed at Royal Musselburgh. Recognised as the fifth oldest golf club in the world, this James Braid designed beauty is always kept in immaculate condition and comes alive heading down the stretch. Steeped in history with The Old Club Cup, competed for every year since 1774, the oldest trophy still competitively played for in the world.

So go on, take in the history of the world's fifth oldest golf course and make it a society outing to remember.

EDINBURGH & WEST LOTHIAN

An abundance of fantastic courses await visitors to Scotland's capital city and its surrounding area.

No trip to Scotland is complete without paying a visit to the capital city Edinburgh. It's immensely popular with visitors from around the world, as it fuses old and new with style and sophistication – delivering an unforgettable experience.

It also happens to be home to a selection of excellent courses, either within or just outside the city limits, so if you happen to be visiting with your golf clubs in tow, so much the better. With approximately 40 courses to choose from, including parkland gems and classic links, a great layout is never far away.

One of these is 'Edinburgh's City Centre Golf Course', which is, of course, Prestonfield. Another James Braid design, it is characterised by difficult par-4s and is located within a former deer estate at the foot of Arthur's Seat, one of Edinburgh's famous landmarks.

The fourth oldest club in the world awaits at Bruntisfield Links Golf Society, located to the north west of the city, in the Cramond Regis Estate. Recently re-worked by Mackenzie & Ebert, who oversee the R&A's Open venue upgrades, this is a superb test amongst mature trees.

Dalmahoy Hotel & Country Club can be found just seven miles west of the city centre and houses two courses. The East famously hosted the Solheim Cup in 1992 and has one of the longest back nines in Scottish golf. The West is shorter and has a fine finish with the par-3 17th, The Wee Wrecker, one of the standout holes.

Murrayfield, next door to Edinburgh Zoo, is another course that is terrific fun, whilst Royal Burgess Golfing Society, established in 1735, is arguably the city's most exclusive and distinguished club.

Another option for your city itinerary is Baberton. The course was also designed by the legendary James Braid and can be found just off the City of Edinburgh Bypass, the south east of the capital. Likewise, Swanston New is a wonderful test of golf with a modern clubhouse to boot, and you'll struggle to get a better welcome anywhere else.

Venturing outwith the city boundaries and the likes of Deer Park and Bathgate are not to be overlooked, with the latter producing many fine Ryder Cup players such as Eric Brown, Bernard Gallacher and Stephen Gallacher.

Kings Acre is another exciting course to play for the whole family, whilst a number of extremely accessible municipal courses, run by Edinburgh Lesiure, are available to play. These include Portobello, Princes and Craigentiny. However, the pick of the bunch has to be Braid Hills, which affords stunning views of the capital's skyline. A fantastic round that won't burn a hole in your pocket – the perfect combination!

The Woll

DID YOU KNOW...

The course record holder at The Roxburghe is none other than 2017 Masters champion Sergio Garcia, who posted a six-under-par 66 in 2000.

The famed par-3 sixth hole at Eyemouth is called 'A Still No Ken' and was once voted Britain's Most Extraordinary Golf Hole.

Wildlife lovers should check out Torwoodlee, which is known for its 200-year-old trees and variety of rare birds. If you're very lucky, you may catch sight of an Osprey flying overhead.

Eyemouth

THE SCOTTISH BORDERS

The 'Gateway to the Home of Golf' is home to some of the finest and most underrated courses in the country.

The Scottish Borders is affectionately known as the 'Gateway to the Home of Golf' for visitors coming up from England and Wales, but you don't need to look far to find a good reason to visit the region. It's renowned for its picturesque scenery, terrific value for money, friendly locals and a collection of fine golf courses.

There are, in actual fact, more than 20 layouts to choose from and, whilst the region certainly doesn't enjoy the same high-profile acclaim as others, it's well worth the effort.

Hawick is the oldest course in the region and an appropriate place to start any Borders trip. It dates all the way back to 1877 and can be found on the picturesque Vertish Hill on the outskirts of the town. Incidentally, Sir Nick Faldo holds the professional course record of 64. Good luck beating it.

Perhaps the best-known venue in the region is The Roxburghe. Located just outside the quaint market town of Kelso, the Dave Thomas-designed course hosted the Scottish Senior Open and is also a former host venue for European Tour Qualifying School. The track can be found within the Roxburghe Estate, owned by the Duke and Duchess of Roxburghe, and it is deservedly considered to be one of the finest inland courses in the country.

Another Thomas design can be found just a short drive away at the Macdonald Cardrona resort, near Peebles. It bears all the hallmarks of one of his designs, with numerous large, sculptured bunkers and huge greens, which are acknowledged as being amongst the best in the area.

Nearby is Peebles Golf Club, which was designed by the great Harry Colt and offers some of the best views of the surrounding countryside. Without question, it is one of the most picturesque courses in Scotland.

Jedburgh is also home to a fantastic course, whilst Torwoodlee, Duns and West Linton are well worth a visit. Woll Golf Course, in Selkirkshire, is another standout course and basks in glorious scenery.

Talking of glorious, you cannot afford to miss Eyemouth. Its par-3 sixth is one of the most photographed holes in Scotland, whilst the 13th measures over 650 yards from the tips, making it one of the longest in the country. Overall, there is so much to explore and enjoy in Borders country. ☘

GLASGOW, STIRLING, LOCH LOMOND, LANARKSHIRE,
DUNBARTONSHIRE, FALKIRK & CLACKMANNANSHIRE

THE HEART OF SCOTTISH GOLF

SANDY'S HOME...

Sandy Lyle lives in Balquhidder, a relatively remote area north of Callander, Stirlingshire.

Sandy Lyle

GREATER GLASGOW & CLYDE VALLEY

Given that Glasgow and the surrounding region is the most densely populated area in Scotland, it's no surprise that it's home to the highest concentration of the country's 550-plus courses.

There are no less than 94 places to play in and around Scotland's largest city, which is more than Fife, Ayrshire or even the East Lothian coast. So if it's an abundance of quality courses that you are looking for, look no further than this urban hub.

It's here that you will find one of the oldest golf clubs in the world, Glasgow Golf Club. It's the ninth oldest to be exact and dates back to 1787. The club is located just five miles from the city centre and the Killermont course was originally designed by Old Tom Morris, before being further upgraded by James Braid and, later, by Dave Thomas. It is a true throwback to a classic, inland golf experience.

That said, it is not the only top quality golf course in and around Glasgow. Cawder is well worth the visit, as it's one of the very best 36-hole golf facilities in west central Scotland. The Championship course has its very own 'Amen Corner' from holes 13 to 16 and is routed over gently undulating parkland filled with an abundance of mature trees. The Keir course complements it perfectly, as it is an excellent shorter test.

Two clubs that neighbour each other in the north of the city, Hilton Park and Milngavie, are also great options. The former is home to two terrific tracks, the Hilton and the Allander, where PGA Tour star Martin Laird cut his golfing teeth. Milngavie, meanwhile, is full of personality and charm. It is perhaps best known for its difficult finish and drivable par-4 fifth, following by one of the best short holes in the area, the par-3 sixth.

Bearsden, Windyhill, Balmore and Douglas Park are other brilliant layouts to consider if you find yourself in this particular area.

There's arguably even more choice to the south of the city, with a particular highlight being Haggs Castle, which has hosted a number of European Tour events over the years. You could also choose to play Whitecraigs, Pollok or Cathkin Braes, which offers fantastic views across the Campsie Hills. To the east, Lenzie Golf Club is a testing mix of moor and parkland.

If you fancy venturing further out of Glasgow, be sure to visit The Carrick on Loch Lomond. The location is unique, with the front nine played out over relatively flat land at the boundary of the Lowlands, while the back nine is routed over higher ground.

Other top picks that will take you just out the city limits are Vale of Leven, Erskine, Gleddoch and the brilliant Mar Hall. What's more, with Glasgow as your base, you're certainly guaranteed to find something to do away from the golf course. ☘

DID YOU KNOW...

Former Open champion and Ryder Cup star Paul Lawrie has the professional course record at Biggar, an impressive 63.

Leadmills Golf Club, which sits near Abington, has the honour of being Scotland's highest golf course, sitting at 1,500 feet above sea level. It is, as expected, noted for its high winds.

Tennis brothers Andy and Jamie Murray, both keen golfers, were made honorary members of Dunblane New Golf Club, with the club's 18th hole being renamed 'The Murrays' Home. "It's really cool," said Jamie. "We're both really honoured."

STIRLING & FORTH VALLEY

Some of the finest inland courses in Scotland can be found in one of its most historically significant regions.

Stirling and Forth Valley is undoubtedly one of the most historically significant parts of Scotland, but it's also home to some of the finest courses in the country. In fact, there are more than 20 first-class layouts for golfers to choose from, including some of the most beloved and underrated inland tracks in Scotland.

The best place to start has to be Stirling Golf Club, which is laid out at the foot of Stirling Castle. The castle was formerly used for the coronation of Scottish Kings and Queens, including Mary Queen of Scots in 1542, and the course today is contained within former hunting grounds. The views the course offers are stunning, with the Ochil and Lomond Hills, the Carse of Stirling, and the Trossachs all visible at different stages on the course. It is a truly special location for golf.

Another highly rated course is Glenbervie, which can be found to the north of Falkirk, just off the M876. It is formerly the home of the PGA in Scotland before its move to Gleneagles and this testing parkland course has also hosted the British Boys Championship in 1983 and 1993, with two familiar names coming out on top: two-time Masters champion Jose Maria Olazabal and Ryder Cup star David Howell.

North of Stirling lies the former spa town of Bridge of Allan, which boasts a wonderful nine-hole course designed by the great Old Tom Morris in 1894. It's always great fun to play, and if you continue upstream on the River Allan, you will arrive in Dunblane - where two-time Wimbledon champion Andy Murray grew up. It is also home to the Dunblane New course and it is well worth a visit.

Nearby Alloa is where you will find top quality courses in Braehead and Alloa Schawpark, both of which will provide a stern test to any golfer.

If you head out on the A91 east of the town, you'll find the likes of Muckhart, Tillicoultry and Dollar, which is an extremely unique Ben Sayers design, as it's renowned for having no bunkers. Muckhart has 27 holes for you to enjoy, comprising of three nine-hole loops.

For a region that has witnessed quite a few famous battles, it's now your turn to battle it out over the many courses of Stirling & Forth Valley.

USEFUL INFORMATION

When to play

Many courses are open all year round, but the golf season generally runs from the start of April until mid-October. This is when the courses tend to be at their best and busiest, with daylight hours at their longest between May and September (typically 5am until 10pm).

Handicap certificates

Some clubs require a handicap certificate or letter of introduction. If you have one, bring it with you.

Arranging golf

During peak season, it's advised to pre-book your round to avoid disappointment. Should you wish to book an Open venue to your itinerary in advance, such as Muirfield or the Old Course at St Andrews, you will have to plan ahead with written applications required months beforehand.

What to wear on the course

Scotland's average summer temperature ranges from 60-74° F (15-23° C), so it is advisable to pack warm and waterproof clothing.

In the clubhouse

While some clubs adopt a relaxed dress code, it is worth noting that denim jeans, collarless shirts and trainers are still generally frowned upon, whilst some clubs insist that gentlemen wear a jacket, collar and tie in the main lounge. If in doubt, check what is acceptable when you book.

Caddies, clubs, trolleys and buggies

Caddies are available at most of the bigger courses but should be arranged in advance. Most clubs provide hand trolley and club hire. Some venues provide buggy hire. If you need a ride-on buggy for medical reasons, you are best to book well in advance.

Emergencies

If you need the police, ambulance or fire brigade during your stay, dial 999. Note: this number should only be used in real emergencies. For all non-emergencies, dial 101.

Getting about

Pop into a VisitScotland iCentre to pick up a touring map of your choice.

HOW TO BOOK GOLF AT ST ANDREWS

The Old Course at St Andrews attracts more than 42,000 rounds a year so special conditions apply to booking a tee time. Around 50% of the course's availability is allocated by public ballot, which is drawn two days in advance of play. For example, tee times for February 3 are drawn on February 1, and so on. The Old Course is closed on Sundays, so there is no ballot draw on Fridays, and entering the ballot is not a guarantee of a tee time. A minimum of two golfers can enter the ballot either by telephone or in person before 2pm and two days before play. Those lucky enough to secure a tee time can find out after 4pm on the website, at the clubhouse, the starters' box, the caddie pavilion, local golf clubs or the St Andrews VisitScotland iCentre. Limited advance reservations are available for single golfers. Advance applications can be requested from the first Wednesday of September for the following year, subject to availability. Visit www.standrews.org.uk/howtobook

OFF THE COURSE

Things to see and do away from the golf course.

Golf may be the reason for your visit to Scotland, but that doesn't mean that it should be the only thing you do when you are here. That would mean missing out on the many other attractions on offer.

Scotland really does have something to suit every taste and budget, with castles to explore and a vast selection of shops for all tastes and budgets. Then there's the tremendous choice of restaurants, cafés and bistros where you can sample some of our local produce.

One of Scotland's great passions is, of course, whisky making, and this ancient tradition is available for you to sample - in more ways than one - with a visit to one of the many distilleries that produce the 'water of life'.

So put down the clubs for an afternoon or two, and see what else Scotland has to offer away from the golf course.
