It is still my belief that members of a ruling party should not have the opportunity to ask questions as they will have the opportunity at internal meetings, thus leaving all the allocated time to the other parties .

As you will observe the SNP nearly always have the majority of questions and supplementaries which I believe is an orchestrated attempt to reduce the amount of time for the other parties to get their questions in.

Ideally i would restrict ruling party questions, time for answers of up to 2 minutes, this would prevent the first minister going on a ramble of a type of lecture and casting up what other parties achieved in comparison - there cannot ever be comparisons as this requires a like for like situation, which can never be in this fast changing world.

We should adopt a style like Westminster to avoid time wasting replies which i reckon to be pre - planned.

Your early comments would be appreciated

REGARDS

J T MORRIS

Hi there,

This is the latest spreadsheet for your perusal and retention.

It is still my belief that members of a ruling party should not have the opportunity to ask questions as they will have the opportunity at internal meetings, thus leaving all the allocated time to the other parties.

As you will observe the SNP nearly always have the majority of questions and supplementaries which i believe is an orchestrated attempt to reduce the amount of time for the other parties to get their questions in.

Ideally i would restrict ruling party questions, time for answers of up to 2 minutes, this would prevent the first minister going on a ramble of a type of lecture and casting up what other parties achieved in comparison - there cannot ever be comparisons as this requires a like for like situation, which can never be in this fast changing world.

We should adopt a style like Westminster to avoid time wasting replies which i reckon to be pre - planned.

Your early comments would be appreciated

REGARDS

J T MORRIS

Spreadsheet information available upon request.